Maison de Montille, Saint-Romain 2018

Made from the négociant side of the de Montille business which buys in grapes, Saint-Romain is a high-altitude Burgundy village which has benefitted from global warming. This is fresh and fragrant with aromas redolent of apples. It deliberately retains a lot of dissolved carbon dioxide, which keeps it fresh and allows less sulphur to be used, so we advise decanting, which will open up the aromas and release some of the carbon dioxide.

Domaine de Montille, Volnay Premier Cru Champans 2013

2013 was a cool year in Burgundy, with harvest delayed until the end of September. This has a burst of redcurrant-like freshness giving zip and energy to the palate.

Domaine de Montille, Pommard Premier Cru Pézerolles 2013

This Pommard is from limestone, not clay soils, and, especially with de Montille's fine touch, tastes quite Volnay-like. It perhaps has more black than red fruit, but is lithe and svelte on the palate. It is quite unlike Pommards from clay soil which are more powerful and tannic.
